“It’ll be an adventure,” my husband’s colleague Ketan said, emphasizing the last word, looking me square in the eye. “An adventure,” he repeated, in case I’d missed it. Ketan recently lent us his well-loved RV for an eight-day road trip through Oregon with our kids, and I learned a few things along the way about cooking well while on an RV adventure.

5 Tips When Packing Food for an RV Road Trip | Kitchen

However, cooking on an RV trip is a little bit different from cooking at home as you have a little less space. And ingredients are often a little bit limited unless you plan ahead. You also don’t want to risk packing too much for elaborate meals. It is a fine balance of having food you enjoy, without an excessive amount of prep or space required. If it can be cooked over a fire, that’s a ...
