I don't much follow the internal machinations of that fractious world, tending to see its incessant bickering, backbiting and jockeying for pole position much as Kissinger did when observing the politics of the university scene: they are "vicious precisely because the stakes are so small."

We've all probably heard the joke about how the "world's oldest profession" is prostitution or that the "world's second-oldest profession" is spying because it was mentioned in the Bible. Jokes aside, these professions were no where near being some of the first. It would make more sense that the very first jobs were based on the earliest human needs. For this list, we chose to cover professions that would have emerged as a result of first human creations such as tools, art ...

Bishops and branch stacking: the second oldest profession. By David Timbs | On 13 July 2020. Branch stacking scandals are not new to Australian politics of whatever colour. Nor is the phenomenon new to the Catholic Church. In fact, the caper originated within Jesus' inner circle and it hasn't let up since. The gold standard was set by the mother of James and John, two of Jesus' first ...
