Positive peer relationships make critical contributions to healthy social emotional development. The Issue. Successfully navigating the social world of peers can be challenging. Children and teenagers benefit from the social and emotional support that friends offer, but they can also experience occasional social stressors and peer conflicts.

The Importance of Peer Relationships For Social-Emotional ...

Rebuilding social relationships is essential to maintaining wellness and preventing relapse. Peer support and self-help groups are invaluable in this regard, because they provide a safe and non-judgemental place for social interaction (Nikkel 1994). After an episode of mental illness, some people need to rebuild their basic social skills as their symptoms can interfere with these. Self-help groups can provide a safe environment in Social Relationships and Peer Support by Janney, Rachel ...

Peer support is distinct from other forms of social support in that the source of support is a peer, a person who is similar in fundamental ways to the recipient of the support; their relationship is one of equality. A peer is in a position to offer support by virtue of relevant experience: he or she has "been there, done that" and can relate to others who are now in a similar situation. Trained peer support workers such as
