NML: Why do you call this the “next” trillion? Paul Zane Pilzer: Today, the food industry represents about one trillion dollars annually; the “sickness business” is another trillion (actually, about $1.4 trillion). These two industries feed one another in a fairly insidious way because such a huge part of sickness today is caused by the poor nutrition supplied by the food industry. These two trillion-dollar industries work together to support that horrifying 61 percent overweight number.
